STUDENT ASSESSMENTS

The preschool usually holds parent-teacher conferences yearly in January/February. Due to the current educational format, assessments in their prior format are not meaningful. They will not show the type of growth your children are experiencing by navigating the world in the midst of a pandemic. Do not underestimate the social learning taking place as they gain empathy through doing their part to keep grandparents and neighbors healthy by isolating and wearing masks. Increased time interacting with families can boost verbal skills and help build attachment, which gives children confidence to explore their world. If you would like to see a copy of the report card we would use during a normal school year, please let me know and I can email a copy.

If I could give a grade to anyone right now, I would give each of our parents and grandparents an A+. You are all doing an amazing job holding your work and family lives together while adding on the role of cyber-school teaching assistant. We see you and appreciate everything you are doing.
